U.S. Army Awards Booz Allen a spot on $554M, Five-Year Contract to Provide Global Training, Support Systems and Mission Support Services

July 31, 2018

MCLEAN, Va.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Jul. 31, 2018-- A major subordinate command of the U.S. Army Contracting Command, the U.S. Army Mission and Installation Contracting Command (MICC) procures services and supplies that are vital to the Army's global mission and to the wellbeing of warfighters. To elevate worldwide integration of training strategies, MICC, Fort Eustis, Virginia, has awarded Booz Allen Hamilton (NYSE: BAH) a spot on the Training Support Systems Enterprise (TSS-E) contract in December to provide global training, support systems and mission support services. This indefinite delivery, indefinite quantity contract has a ceiling value of $554M over a potential five-year period with six other prime contractors.

"This contract builds on Booz Allen's longstanding partnership with the U.S. Army to protect our nation from military threats," said Kevin McClung, principal at Booz Allen. "Our industry-leading mission consultants will bring their expertise and innovative thinking in the field of training and training management. They will provide support to operations and develop solutions and support to Army ranges and land assets. In addition, they will provide the Army's emerging Synthetic Training Environment (STE) with support in the Live, Virtual, Constructive and Gaming (LVC&G) domains enabling an operationally relevant training environment for Army Warfighters. "
